Escape Room's context:

You open your eyes in the dark, cold cell of Fox River State Penitentiary

Your pulse races as memories flood back: framed for a crime you didn't commit.

You've been planning this escape for months. Everything depends on breaking out of here tonight.

You glance around, scanning your cell. The guards will make their rounds soon.

Time's ticking. You've got to act fast. There's no going back.
Every second counts.

DIFFICULTIES

The first great difficulty we encountered, was understanding the sample code.

Once we understood it, the difficulties arised when trying to improve the code. That was the big challenge.

The greatest challenge was the dog part, in which we didn't really know whether to treat it as a room, key, furniture, or how exactly.
